Saturday night parties not only dotted the town, they extended way down into the country. There was Colombian Ambassador and Senora de Zuleta Angel's dinner for the Italian Ambassador and Signora Brosio, and the Albert Deweys' celebration of their wedding anniversary (which ever one that's crystal), and dozens of others within city limits. But none was more active than the picnic down at Cremona, Gen. Howard Davidson's estate on the Patuxent.

Annually one of Washington's regular square dance groups hies itself down to "Davy's" plush country place in Maryland and parties from 5 o'clock on. Some play tennis, some swim or sun by the pool, others simply take the rosy view over a martini.

Admiral "Brownie" Temple and his wife, Priscilla, were there and the Alden Sibleys, the Carroll Morgans, Slocum and Marian Kingsbury, Julie Sibley, Betty and Jack Hoopes, George Doole, Toby Palms, and Noel and Elena Macy who, fresh from three months in Germany, hopped a plane to their boat on the Chesapeake and cruised up to the party. Ruth Door was also in the group but sans husband Russell who's on a world trip for the World Bank. Comparatively recent comers to Washington, they have bought Lower Ranleigh in McLean, Va.
